TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE LEONARD COURTNEY

DEAR MR. COURTNEY,

The verses which occupy the ensuing pages were inspired by the hope of assisting in the promotion of a reasonable human feeling towards those who were our adversaries in the late epical conflict. It is with an abashed sense of the littleness of my service to a great cause that I ask you to let me link them with your name.

Hazlitt said of Charles James Fox: "His love of his country did not consist in hatred of the rest of mankind." Unhappily, however, there are many persons whose love of their country appears to consist in nothing else, and from some of these I anticipate a repetition of the charge, already brought against me, of anti-patriotism; an accusation perhaps best treated with disdain, ye. in itself so odious, that to suffer it without impatience is difficult. Especially is it odious to one who has prided himself on being peculiarly English in his sympathies and sentiments, and who comes of many generations of such Englishmen as fought indomitably for faith and commonweal, such Englishwomen as lived the beautiful ancient life of our pastoral highlands, in the lee of northern hills and by the flowing of Swale and Ure. To one conscious of these noble origins, conscious, too, of having loved his country with the vigilant love that cannot brook a shadow upon her honour, the charge of being against her because he deplores her temporary attitude and action, brings a kind of amazement that has in it something akin to despair. But hope returns at last—the hope, nay, the assurance, that the spirit of detraction and falsification is no true English growth, and must presently perish, or seek some fitter soil and clime.

You, at any rate, will not accuse me of inconstancy to my beloved and worshipped homeland—you who have endured a kindred obloquy in greater measure, proportioned to your greater courage and achievement.

I remain, with high respect,
Sincerely yours,
WILLIAM WATSON.

NOTE

THESE poems, with two exceptions, have already appeared in the Daily News, the Speaker, the Westminster Gazette, the Saturday Review, the Fortnightly Review, and the Cornhill Magazine, to whose respective Editors my thanks are due for permission to republish.

FOR ENGLAND

THE ENEMY

Unskilled in Letters, and in Arts unversed;
Ignorant of empire; bounded in their view
By the lone billowing veldt, where they upgrew

Amid great silences; a people nursed

Apart—the far-sown seed of them that erst

Not Alva's sword could tame: now, blindly hurled

Against the march of the majestic world,
They fight and die, with dauntless bosoms curst.

Crazed, if you will; demented, not to yield

Ere all be lost! And yet it seems to me
They fought as noblest Englishmen did use
To fight, for freedom; and no Briton he,
Who to such valour in a desperate field
A knightly salutation can refuse.

PAST AND PRESENT

- When lofty Spain came towering up the seas
 - This little stubborn land to daunt and quell,
- The winds of heaven were our auxiliaries,
 And smote her, that she fell.
- Ah, not to-day is Nature on our side!

 The mountains and the rivers are our foe.
- And Nature with the heart of man allied Is hard to overthrow.

III

ON BEING STYLED "PRO-BOER"

FRIEND, call me what you will: no jot care I:

I that shall stand for England till I die.

England! The England that rejoiced to see

Hellas unbound, Italy one and free;

The England that had tears for Poland's doom,

And in her heart for all the world made room;

The immortal England whom I, too, have served,

Accounting her all living lands above, In Justice, and in Mercy, and in Love.

"LENIENCY"

What voice is this, of bale and wrath?

"We have not burned enough, or slain;

Too little havoc marks our path;

We are too gentle, too humane.

"From countless roof-trees be there rolled

The smoke of expiatory fires!

More incense yet an hundredfold

The unsated God of War requires."

Blind from the first, blind to the end,

Blind to all signs that ask men's gaze!

In vain by lips of foe or friend

The world cries shame upon your ways.

Blind beyond cure! Despoil and burn;
Fling forth the helpless — babes as well;

And let the children's children learn To hate us with the hate of hell.

From whatsoever taint remain

Of lingering justice in our heart,

Purge us: erase the poor last stain

Of pity; yea, act out your part;

Speed as along the downward track;

Delay the dawn, defeat the light;

And thrust the human spirit back

Into the night, into the night.

FORCE AND FREEDOM

Oн, doubtless ye can trample and enchain,
Sow death and breathe out winter; but can ye

Persuade the destined bondsman he is free,
Or with a signal build the summer again?
Oh, ye can hold the rivulets of the plain
A little while from nuptials with the sea,
But the fierce mountain-stream of Liberty
Not edicts and not hosts may long restrain.
For this is of the heights and of the deeps,

Born of the heights and in the deeps conceived.

This, 'mid the lofty places of the mind,
Gushes pellucid, vehemently upheaved;
And tears and heart's blood hallow it, as it sweeps

Invincibly on, co-during with mankind.

TO ONE ESPOUSING UNPOPULAR TRUTH

- Not yet, dejected though thy cause, despair,
- Nor doubt of Dawn for all her laggard wing.
- In shrewdest March the earth was mellow-ing,
- And had conceived the Summer unaware.
- With delicate ministration, like the air,
- The sovereign forces that conspire to bring

Light out of darkness, out of Winter Spring,

Perform unseen their tasks benign and fair.

The sower soweth seed o'er vale and hill,

And long the folded life waits to be born;

Yet hath it never slept, nor once been still:

And clouds and suns have served it night and morn;

The winds are of its secret council sworn;
And Time and nurturing Silence work its will.

LAMENTATION

- O BARLY fall'n, uncrowned with enviced laurel,
 - O lives that nameless come and noteless go,
- Our vainly brave in an ignoble quarrel,

 That fought unhating an unhating foe!
- Ye pass, ye cease; in alien dust your dust is;
 - Carnage and tears depart not, wrath remains;

And Power derides the lips that counsel justice,

And nations wonder, and the world ar. raigns.

And foresight of how long the end yet tarries

To no man born of woman hath He given,

Who marshals all His flashing legionaries
Nightly upon the silent field of heaven.

VIII

MELANCHOLIA

In the cold starlight, on the barren beach,
Where to the stones the rent sea-tresses
clave,

I heard the long hiss of the backward wave

Down the steep shingle, and the hollow

speech

Of murmurous cavern-lips, nor other breach
Of ancient silence. None was with me, save

Thoughts that were neither glad nor swect nor brave,

But restless comrades, each the foe of each.

And I beheld the waters in their might

Writhe as a dragon by some great spell curbed

And foiled; and one lone sail; and over me

The everlasting taciturnity;

The august, inhospitable, inhuman night, Glittering magnificently unperturbed.

IX

ACHIEVEMENT

- Who says we fail? We prosper beyond dreams.
- As architects of ruin we have no peers.
- We thought to fire but farmsteads: we have lit
- A flame less transient in the hearts of men.
- We are ill at building? Yet have we at least
- Destroyed to better purpose than we knew.
- We have raised up heroes where we found but hinds,

We have ravaged well, our rapine is not vain.

Redder from our red hoof-prints the wild rose

Of freedom shall afresh hereafter spring,
And in our own despite are we the sires
Of liberty, as night begets the day.
Sufficient claim to memory this I deem,
Title enow, were other passport none.

ROME AND ANOTHER

SHE asked for all things, and dominion such As never man had known,

The gods first gave; then lightly, touch by touch,

O'erthrew her seven-hilled throne.

Imperial Power, that hungerest for the globe,

Restrain thy conquering feet,

Lest the same Fates that spun thy purple robe

Should weave thy winding-sheet.

THE INEXORABLE LAW

We too shall pass, we too shall disappear,
Ev'n as the mighty nations that have waned
And perished. Not more surely are ordained
The crescence and the cadence of the year,
High-hearted June, October spent and sere,
Than this gray consummation. We have reigned

Augustly; let our part be so sustained

That Time, far hence, shall hold our memory dear!

Let it be said: "This Mistress of the sword And conquering prow, this Empire swoln with spoils,

Yet served the human cause, yet strove for Man;

Hers was the purest greatness we record;

- We whose ingathered sheaves her tilth foreran,
- Whose peace comes of her tempests and her toils."

AN IDEAL PASSION

Not she, the England I behold,
My mistress is; nor yet
The England beautiful of old,
Whom Englishmen forget.

The England of my heart is she,

Long hoped and long deferred,

That ever promises to be,

And ever breaks her word.

XIII

THE UNSUBDUED

Our tears, our wounds, our sacrifices! Yea,
But what of theirs, whose monstrous agony towers,

Darkening the noon? Their woe outmatches ours

As Alps the Wrekin. No soft hands allay

Their giant pain. A whole world's wonder, they

Fight their lorn fight against invincible powers.

- From earth's rough breast their tragic valour flowers,
- Fostered in tempest through the thunderous day.
- Calamity makes them great. Have we alone
- No eyes, when all men witness and acclaim?
- The sound of their rude warriorship is blown
- From land to land. Earth shouts afar their fame.
- Bruised, broken in shards, this people nought can tame;
- They have a heart that cannot be o'er-thrown.

GREETING

(Lines read at a meeting of Englishwomen)

I GREET you and am with you, Friends of Peace,

Of Equity, of Freedom. 'Tis an hour Inhospitable to Reason's tempering word; Yet, being brave, being women, you will speak

The thought that must be spoken, without fear.

The Voice of Chivalry grows faint; the note Of Patriotism is well-nigh overborne.

For what is Patriotism but noble care

For our own country's honour in mens'
eyes,

And zeal for the just glory of her arms? If it be aught but this we'll none of it. Keep then that zeal, that noble care alive; Keep then from altogether perishing The light of the authentic patriot flame: Even as another remnant kept it clear, When in an England errant from herself A dull King and his purblind counsellors Goaded the New World to fling off the Old. And in this hour when England half forgets That Empire dies not starved but surfeited, Warn her that tho' she 'whelm a kindred race,

A valiant people, stubborn-built as we,
Yet shall they gnarr hereafter at her heel,
Secretly unsubdued though beaten down;
Too near ourselves to be in spirit o'ercome
But on fierce memories fed, and evermore
Upborne in heart by the saluting world.

A LAODICEAN

- TIMOROUS, hesitant voice, how utterly vile
 I hold you!
 - Voice without wrath, without ruth—empty of hate as of love!
- Different notes from these, O watchman, blow to the midnight!
 - Loud, in a deep-lulled land, trumpeter, sound an alarm!

XVI

FOR ENGLAND

- OF all great deaths on English ground, thine most,
- Simon de Montfort, doth my spirit stir.
- Thou fought'st for England and didst die for her,
- Thyself of other race, from outland coast.
- Law's mandatory and Freedom's, thou thy host

Didst hurl against a sceptred law-breaker; Nor didst thou blench when, black from plume to spur,

- Rode Fate on Evesham field, and all was lost.
- Then for their lives thou bad'st thy noblest fly:
- "Thou dying we would not live," they made reply,
- And dauntless round thy dauntlessness were mown;
- And thou with wrath that hewed its way on high
- Fell'st fighting the steep fight of Liberty, In a crashing forest of the foe, alone.

XVII

METAMORPHOSIS

- THE golden voices of the nobler day,
- Uttering the Statesman's or the Sage's thought,
- Or from the Muse's mountain fastness blown;
- Great voices of great lovers of their land;
- All have departed, all return no more.
 - What of their mighty Mistress, her whom these
- Gloried to serve? Behold, she staggers forth,

Paving her path with babes and sucklings slain;

Shouting her own applause, if haply so

She may shout down the hisses of the world;

Warned vainly, and rebuked by all her Past;

England, our ancient England, strange and new!

O loveliness transformed, what Comuswand

Hath touched thee? What enchantment hath prevailed,

That thou so deep descendest from so high,

Fall'n to this Ogre's work, more meet for them

That painted crimson the Anatolian snows?

At least one singer, honouring evermore

Thine inmost soul through all its outward change,

Shall not, in life's last passion of farewell,

When the dark wings close over him, bear hence

The dreadful memory, that he once blasphemed,

With benison on cruelty bestowed,

The holy spirit of song; or stood at gaze,

Unto these deaths consenting, foully mute.

XVIII

HARVEST

A NAKED people in captivity;

A land where Desolation hath her throne;

The wrath that is, the rage that is to be:

Our fruits, whereby we are known.

XIX

THE SLAIN

- Partners in silence, mates in noteless doom,
- Peers in oblivion's commonalty merged;
- Unto like deeds by differing mandates urged,
- And equalled in the unrespective tomb;
- Leal or perfidious, cruel or tender, whom
- Precipitate fate hath of your frailties purged;
- Whom duly the impartial winds have dirged,

In autumn or the glorying vernal bloom:

Already is your strife become as nought;

Idle the bullet's flight, the bayonet's thrust,

The senseless cannon's dull, unmeaning word;

Idle your feud; and all for which ye fought
To this arbitrament of loam referred,
And cold adjudication of the dust.

XX

THE TRAGIC CHANGE

To follow Truth was yesterday

To England's heart the surest way.

Follow her now, and thou shalt share

An exile's fate, an exile's fare.

XXI

LINES TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE JAMES BRYCE, M.P.

IN ANSWER TO A LETTER

THANKS for your heartening word, that came from one

Acquainted with the story of many peoples,
Acquainted with the life of many peoples;
An honoured labourer for the amity
And weal of peoples, loftier things than sway.

Thanks for your heartening word, that came to one

Fated to hoist a somewhat lonely sail,

Against the wind and tide; that came to one

Fated to be at variance with the time,

Touching the parts it hisses or applauds;

Who liefer would sit mute, and be withdrawn

Far into some consolatory Past,

Among old voices, the unperishing,

Save that such words of cheer the courier Hours

Bring when most needed, words restorative, Coming across the silence or dispraise, Coming across the welter and the gloom. I lose not hope or faith in this great land, This many-victoried, many-heroed land,

Though hope oft sinks, and faith is hard to hold.

She that with ruthless John and truthless Charles,

And James the despicable, by voice or sword

Strove, and not vainly, for her liberties;

She that from him, the humbler of the world,

Whose thunderous heel was on submitted thrones,

Kept whole and virginal her liberties;

She that so joyed at sound of other lands

Heaved high with passion for their liberties;

- Shall yet win back—'tis thus at least I dream,'
- Being her lover, and dreaming from the heart—
- Shall yet win back her lost and wandering soul,
- Shall yet recall herself from banishment;
 Shall yet remember—she forgets to-day—
 How the munificent hands of Life are full
- Of gifts more covetable an hundredfold

 Than man's dominion o'er reluctant man;

 And come upon old wealth disused and idle,
- Her scorned estate and slighted patrimony, Auriferous veins in all the field of being,

With those shy treasures no self-seeking wins,

Rather self-search, and grace of fortunate hours.

The Cæsars and the Alexanders pass,

Whilst he that drank the hemlock, he that drank

The Cup more dread, on Calvary hill, remain,

Servants and mighty conquerors of the world.

The great achievement of the human mind Is the idea of Justice. More than arts And sciences, than faiths and rituals, this Lifts all our life above the life of beasts.

Chiefly by this are we a nobler kind,

The Earth's elect and separate; lost to this,

Our state is as the state of beasts indeed,

That snatch their meat, one from another's mouth,

And without pain another's pain behold;
Though these are guiltless, knowing not light or law.

XXII

THE TRUE IMPERIALISM

Here, while the tide of conquest rolls

Against the distant golden shore,

The starved and stunted human souls

Are with us more and more.

Vain is your Science, vain your Art,
Your triumphs and your glories vain,
To feed the hunger of their heart
And famine of their brain.

Your savage deserts howling near,

Your wastes of ignorance, vice, and shame,—

Is there no room for victories here, No field for deeds of fame?

Arise and conquer while ye can

The foe that in your midst resides,

And build within the mind of Man

The Empire that abides.

XXIII

THE DRAGONS

PRINCE VORTIGERN—so run the ancient tales—

A stronghold sought to build in wildest Wales;

But some fell Power frustrated each assay,
And nightly wrecked the labours of the day;
Till Merlin came, and bade the builders all,
Beneath the escarp'd and many-bastioned wall,

Dig deep; and lo, two dragons, o'er whose lair Nothing secure might rise, lay sleeping there. Search the foundations, you that build a State;

For if the dragon forms of Wrath and Hate Lie coiled below, and darkly bide their hour, Fear walks the rampart, Fear ascends the tower.

And let it not content you that they sleep:

Drive them with strong enchantments to the deep.

First of such charms is Perfect Justice; then Comes the heart's word that conquers beasts and men.

No other craft shall serve—no spells but these

Drive the old dragons to the whelming seas.

XXIV

ALPHA AND OMEGA

HE throned her in the gateways of the world,

He 'stablished her on high before the peoples.

He raised her as a watch-tower from the wave,

He built her as a lighthouse on the waters.

He maketh and unmaketh without end,

And He alone, who is first and last, shall judge her.

ODE ON THE DAY OF THE CORONATION OF KING EDWARD VII. BY WILLIAM WATSON

SMALL QUARTO, Price 2s. 6d. net.

Some Press Opinions

TIMES.—"His poem is published with appropriately regal magnificence of paper and margin. And the magnificence is not only material. There is a suggestion all through it of the os magna sonaturum which exactly fits the great occasion. Its theme is the obvious one, not obviously treated, of the strange growth of our greatness, the mystery of our future, the awful responsibility of our present. Who will surpass its fit splendour of words, who will equal its grave memory of the solemn tenure on which we hold the glories of our vast inheritance."

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"We have sometimes had cause to protest against Mr. Watson's utterances on Imperial affairs; but we are glad to make amends now, and to say that there is no man living who uses the King's English with such stately grace as he."

SPECTATOR.—"Instinct with the spirit of sober Imperialism, and marked by the almost unerring felicity of phrase that has always distinguished Mr. Watson's best work."

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"His poem is a sonorous wave of brooding, reminiscential passion, enveloping and volatilising all his thought. Like Milton's poetic references to politics, Mr. Watson's are in matter slight and not very new, but in manner how superlative! The poetry of his conception is enough to make the poem the loftiest of its family; his rhetoric, intellectual and melodious, makes it the most certain of endurance."

DAILY NEWS.—"His thought is bold and dignified, and he raises the whole subject from mere prettiness to the character of a grave and weighty message to the nation. The treatment is in sympathy with the thought. The Ode glows with colour, laid on with the boldness of conscious power. The imagery is at once just, daring, and beautiful, suggestive of the largeness of the theme, the vastness of our history."

Speaker.—"He has developed his subject largely and characteristically, in verse that charms us by its marmorean property of style, the unstrained distinction of its rhythms, and its unflagging aptitude of expression. But two other qualities which Mr. Watson possesses in an eminent degree are exhibited in this Ode; one is the power of composition, which is rare among English writers of any kind; the other is the sense of history, which he shares with no other living poet."

MORNING LEADER.—"Its structure is massively harmonious, and it is built up with an architectonic grandeur which is rare in contemporary poetry. It is not a rambling series of lines, but a finely proportioned monument, rising in calm dignity from plinth to pinnacle."

ECHO.—"It is powerful and suggestive, full of real insight and sympathy into the true position of a King who comes into such a mighty heritage."

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"It is worthy of its author's fame; it has a dignity, a grace and a forcefulness of expression, and a metrical excellence which are no small achievement. The poem is marked by elevation of thought and breadth of imagination."

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.—"In this 'Coronation Ode' there is a high and unbroken level of grave eloquence, the thought and expression alike saturated with the influences of the central current of English poetry, from Milton, through Wordsworth, to Matthew Arnold. There is no imitativeness; it is simply verse profoundly and unmistakably English."

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"His Coronation Ode has all the qualities which gave to his earlier works their genuine distinction. In point of style Mr. Watson has always appealed to scholars, to the few... His conceptions are like his language. The conception of this Ode is large, the diction is stately, and such as befits the salutation of a people come 'proud from the ages.'... For sustained level of workmanship no poet of this generation can equal him.... The little turns which denote the scholar and charm scholars are always appearing.... His pictures have bigness. He can charge a few words with sense of a wide sweep over history."

GUARDIAN.—"The Ode is full of dignity and restraint. It rings true."

BOOKMAN.—"Here is the authentic muse—et vera incessu patet dea... An ode which does honour to the literature of our time."
